MUCH OF A KIND

The Reichstag on Monday voted non-confidence in the Von Papen Government, and dissolved for its pains. The cabinet will stay in office and send the elected representatives of the nation back to their constituents to explain why they refused to support the power that is.

The German people are probably wondering now just what is the essential difference between the Kaiserism they got rid of and the republic they got in. Hindenburg has succeeded himself, but "yes" people seem to get about as little attention as did Kaiser.

This may be in the large way in the interests of the country and of the world, but there is no doubt the point. When the public will be openly hearted people and not be provoked to extremes as occurred into submission.

So far as world interests are concerned there is not much to be gained from the Von Papen Hiller. Neither of them intends to pay reparations claims, and both say they will re-arm Germany if and to what extent they choose and the taxpayers will permit.

CANADA'S SECOND BIG CROP

While all eyes are fixed on the wheat crop, it is interesting to note that the second crop is also producing a crop of oats that is estimated to run 42,000,000 bushels.

That means the Canadian farmer is using more horses than a few years ago. But it also means a raising more cattle, sheep, pigs and poultry, and more of the products of the farm.

It is to be expected that the Canadian farmer will continue to develop these branches of his business.

Over the great part of Canada oats take the place that corn holds in the central states, as the standard feed crop. Only a small portion of the oat crop is exported as grain. A moderate percentage goes into the various types of oatmeal in the kitchen at breakfast time. The bulk of the crop is fed to horses or turned into beef and pork and milk and eggs and so on.

A big crop of oats is the signal that "mixed farming" is to hold its place, and a large place, in Canadian farm production. It is the only way in which the oats can be turned to account.

THE CHEAP DOLLAR HELPS

Because the Canadian dollar will not pay for a dollar's worth of United States coal, that commodity is losing ground in the market. It is estimated that the Alberta mines increased their sales in Manitoba by 200,000 tons, and they hope to make a further gain of 100,000 tons next winter.

That is important to the Canadian Alberta miners, mine-owners, and all business interests in this province. It is important, too, as illustrating how the depreciated Canadian dollar tends to develop products out of the Canadian market and secure the home trade to the Canadian producer. With our dollar at par, Manitoba would be burning United States coal as usual.

If our dollar were worth still less in the United States the advantage to Canadian miners and producers would be correspondingly greater. If Canada were to drop the gold standard, and let our dollar fall to its trading level in New York, Alberta and Nova Scotia would almost certainly capture the Ontario market, with no doubt cost to the Ontario market.

There is no doubt about it. Producers of all classes, whether they sell at home or abroad, would correspondingly benefit.

The objection is it would take more of our less valuable dollars to pay our debts in New York.
There is no doubt about that, and our indebtedness has been stood as a barrier against the advancement of the Canadian market. But it is time to consider whether it would not be better to give our producers the full benefit of the production that will then to continue to share change them in order to preserve our standing in Wall Street.

NEXT, AN EMPIRE EXHIBITION?

The Prince of Wales is to open an Anglo-Danish exposition in Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark.
Something more than a mere show is to be given an exposition in Buenos Aires, described as the first British Empire exhibition ever held outside the Empire.

The name suggests the purpose of the Danish exposition is similar to that staged in the Argentine capital. The Danes are large traders with Britain and mean to keep their customers if they can.
This is important to Canada because the Danes export to England mainly beef, dairy products, and other foodstuffs of kind which Canada also hopes to sell there in ever-larger quantities. The exposition is intended to strengthen their grip on the British market, by more widely advertising their goods among British importing firms and by cultivating cordial relations between the two peoples.

These are methods of promoting commercial interests to which no possible exception can be taken. That they will in degree offset the preferences arranged at the Imperial Conference is the hope of our enterprising Danish rivals for British customers.

Why not counter these outside efforts to capture and hold British trade by staging in Canada an Empire exhibition, definitely planned to give to the peoples of the British nation to make full use of the opportunities which exist in trade among themselves instead of with foreign countries? An exposition of the kind would be peculiarly interesting to the Imperial Conference. It would serve the purpose of making more clear to the public what are the opportunities for trade which are opened up by the agreements there reached.

Forty Years Ago

From the Files of the Edmonton Bulletin

The Impasse at Regina.
Calgary Tribune—The feeling is strong that the session has been simply wasted, owing to the incomplete attendance at three or four members.

Montreal Star—Such a fragment of a session common decency would not go to prove that the Territories were not fit as yet to be entrusted with the management of their own finances.

Calgary Herald—It seems scarcely possible that the four members of the executive could thus summarily dispose of with the session of the assembly in appreciating an enormous revenue.

Regina Leader—The whole affair is one of the most unfortunate and ridiculous that has happened in the Northwest.

Medicine Hat Times—The events which have transpired in the Assembly during the past week have done much to improve the people of the Northwest with confidence in their legislators.

Qu'Appelle Vindicator—The opponents of responsible government for the Territories have, at last about succeeded in getting to some extent that the progressive party in the last legislature were wrong in their demands for representative government. The party which claim that Birt, Birt and Co., would be satisfied until they had had their revenge on Hamilton and the other supporters of responsible government.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Fredericton—General Conroy, who surrendered at Paradeboro, has returned to the Transvaal with his wife and two children. He has been absolutely no grievance with regard to his treatment during his long exile. He said he was content with the terms of peace, and was certain that Boer and British troops would not be sent to the Transvaal.

London—Returns show that a total of 20,000 troops were employed by the British in South Africa. The first contingent of British troops, 1874, wounded 2,000, died of wounds or disease 1,000.

This Edmonton is fast growing into a city can be seen from the large amount of building that has been going on all summer. Not only does this include several splendid blocks in the business part of the town, but residences are springing up everywhere extending into the suburbs.

The survey, compelling the opening of new streets and the survey of more lots.

G. V. Alloway and H. T. Champion of Winnipeg came in to see the city.

C. T. Montgomery of P. J. Saskatchewan is in town.

J. R. Matheson is building shops at Fraser's Landing, in which to take supplies to the mission at Onion Lake.

The funeral of the late C. M. Neiser took place this morning.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Dundas—Suffragettes tried to break up a meeting here addressed by Hon. Winston Churchill, and the police had to remove the disturbers. Mr.
Churchill was advocating a federation scheme for Great Britain.

Financed by British capital, the Pembina Coal Co., is to proceed at once with the development of its property west of the city, and expects to be in position to ship several hundred tons daily by spring.

Peking—The Government has approved Dr. Sun Yat-sen's plan to send a mission to the United States way as one item in the program of the modernization of China.

TEN YEARS AGO

His Excellency Baron Byng was tendered a reception at the armories last evening, attended by about 4,000 citizens.

London—Edward Kippen was a statement to the press denied that he had given the Clare Sheridan mission on either side of the Atlantic.

Saskatoon—Sir John Wilton and Major Bruce of Medicine Hat are touring the west in the interests of the Western Canada Colonization Association.

Paris—Belgium has formally demanded 100,000, 000 gold marks from Germany on reparations account.

A carload of Edmonton coal is being shipped to Levin, Quebec, the first to be marketed so far east.

Three Fears

By Edgar A. Guest

Nothing to fear save bitterness And envy and crime and shame, And only the bitterest of all These terrors stay the same.

For loss may be a friend dispensed Like rain which drenches the soil, And though the luxuries are prized
The best joys come from toil.

And so let's face the coming year And bravely play the conqueror's part, We'll only have the bitterest of all Bitterness, envy, shame.

We'll play the game with heads erect, Come, failure or success,
No shame in us shall men detect, Nor any new repentance.

Time was, not so many years ago, when it was considered that the most important of all human labors tasks would be accomplished, but with the advent of electricity rays even the button to be done away. The latest use of the light beam is furnished in a new drinking fountain in the office of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N.Y. While the thirsty child drinks, the intercept a beam of light which turns on the water.

SIDE GLANCES - By George Clark

By George Clark

Vancouver, B.C.—This Edmonton ex-caller who reached me a few weeks ago, saying, "You mentioned you had a cottage on a hillside overlooking the city. Well, you know you can't see the city go by. Man, don't you know Heaven when you see it?" ought to be with me today. I'm sitting on a hillside looking down from the steep slope of Capitol Hill clear down to Vancouver Harbor. A tanker from Peru is coming through the Second Narrows pass. A little tug is struggling to yard a boom of eight sections. In the street is an 800-ton freighter at anchor waiting to berth at the Pool elevator, to load grain for Europe. The M. S.
Aurora is hosing down her decks with a couple of miles further west, after a record-breaking run from New Zealand. She is a day ahead of schedule. With a telescope I can see the people on her decks craning their eyes to get their first view of Pier D and the Vancouver skyline.

Around the inlet, Greave mountain and its chalet, Mt. Crown, with its two elegant lions, and Seymour raise their peaks to the sky. Through First Narrows I can see Pt. Atkinson, named for Vancouver's boat-builder, Bowen Island and Mt. Strachan on Vancouver Island. To the south, looking behind the busy city, can be seen the Fraser river delta, Point Roberts at the boundary and San Juan group at the entrance to Puget Sound. Beyond that again are the white peaks of the Olympics the state of Washington.

It is a white and a white and a white and a white steam call attention to a C.P.R. freight rounding the curve beneath me some 300 feet.

The quietness, the beauty and glory of it, with green forests and fields, slate colored water, the bright colors of the ships and the dark mass of Vancouver Park beyond with contented people. It is in memory's call. C.D. Woodrow's sonnet, "I do not ask so very much of Life":

Only a little house to share with you—A tent or house, to shelter me from strife, A mate to love, where dreaming might come true, A path of sky where moons would walk and The ever-changing murmur of the sea Beyond the door; and on the window pane The kindly flicker of a fire, At back and front a little square of soil Most generously blessed with shade and sun, When I am old, to live and die, and Where two might dream that all the toll was done.

If I might have but these, the world might keep All other people for which I now may weep.

There are people for whom I now have learned the art of agreeable living. Some do it on little holdings that run down to the sea, with a garden patch, a few fruit trees, chickens and a little live stock, supplementing the gifts of the forest, field and the sea by a couple of months' fishing for the salmon catches, or a few months' work in a log-camp, where men are men and live out of the land. Now and then one meets an unusual clap who has worked out an unusual mode of easy living in one of the Fraser valley, formerly a Hollywood denizen, who plies the coast as far as Alaska with his canoe, and who has built himself a comfortable life with his help at San Diego and ran her to Vancouver Harbor. She is his lifeline and workaholic. You will guess that he has a wife, whose name is Diana, and that she likes the carefree life too.

up coast every summer with his wife and family with the fruit. It is four years ago I lectured in Authors and professional men are not novelties in the habit of the humble folks who never make page 1, like the young electrician I saw at Port Alaska, or a mechanic at Powell River, or an electrician at the mill at Coal Harbour, or a living on comfortable well-kept boats of their own owning, which they travel on in pursuit of work and pleasure, and are more inclined to ordinary folk who like to keep a venture.

It was at the B.C. Fair I came across another type of man, a man who solved the problem of easy living. A well stocked fruit garden, raised a desire for some strawberries and raspberries which grew in the garden.

"Just get a couple of buckets and pick for yourselves."

After the two buckets were filled I went to make settlement. He wouldn't take a dime. After a little tactful pressing he explained the situation. "I'm not buying anything, I haven't time to bother with the fruit. It's four years ago at last year I cleared $10,000 and I should do better this year."

I didn't try to force the dollar on him after that.
He said he was a man who had made his money the salesman with a big boat his chance. I found them selling everything from moccasins to watches.
It was a great life, even if it was a little hard.

If you don't make much money—and they all seemed to be making money.

The sunshine and the beaches here have set a fashion in sun tan. So fashionable has it become that a contest was held at the Exhibition. Prizes were given to the man who had the most sun tan the best coat of tan. That's a sign of the times.
At one time they have been sent to death for exposing their backs.

Significant too is the comment on it. Says the Vancouver Sun:

Stripped to their waists, with the muscles of their backs rippling under the sun, the men were a sight to behold. The men of the Old Greeks could come down from Mount Olympus to give lessons in healthy living.

When the sun was over and they were slipped into their clothes again, they were nothing but mere mortals, shorn of their heroic personality, indistinguishable in the crowd.

If the shedding of clothes can transform persons into gods, who can be seen as gods, then the men and women here for taking to secluded places and living in the land, with the healthful sun-rays playing on their bodies.

If broadcasting were stopped the weather dows, we think—Ottawa Journal.

Boys Drink, Girls Break Friendship

Don't Give Dates—Forget 'Em, Advise Virginia Lee

By VIRGINIA LEE
Boys and girls, two 17-year-olds, are both very fond of boys who drink. Both have broken the friendship. Both boy friend didn't know his place and is now going with a girl who seems to suit him better. Both naturally hurt, if he should break naturally it is to see her with him on the day of her first date.

Billie: Being the youngest of six boys is no joke, it is Bill! Naturally your brothers think you are an infant and give you the dirty jobs to do. They want you to know their authority. I am glad you laugh off the raising. That is the best way keep it up.

Yes, you are old enough to go out with girls your own age once in a while, and I'd just quit that right if I were you. Also on having sex time off. Stand up for your rights, although it is good naturally, and in a short time you will be older and allowed more liberty. Good luck to you.

Wondering Blue Eyes: I think it probably is your boy friend's youth that makes him want to go with other girls occasionally. His youth and the fact that the other boys doubtless raze him and make him feel he should not attract attention to you. Why don't you go with other boys occasionally, making him frankly about it as he tells you when he has other dates? If he really cares about you that will break him of his fickleness more quickly than anything else.

Merry Aunt: I am sorry to be late in answering your letter. I reached the office while I was on vacation. However, as the matter you ask occurred so long ago, better let it rest. When you see the teacher again, when school resumes or later, when school resumes if anything it said about the affair you can explain. But don't badly tell anyone you forgot about it. It is likely to hurt their feelings. Be tactful.

Your Children

INTEREST IS SECRET OF LEARNING

"Let's have questions and answers," said Thomas.

"Oh, yes, left," answered Barbara, unfolding her napkin and laying it across her knee.

"School is about to begin," remarked their father sagely, "and I think it is just as well to see how much you remember. Let me see what you know."

"A general," answered Thomas. "Not enough. Who was he?"

"French," said Barbara.

"Not enough either. Don't tell me you haven't learned about Napoleon Bonaparte, your youngsters."

"We haven't had him in our room," explained the male twin. "We've only had the presidents. But I guess he was a king or something."

He was very important, wasn't he? Their father patiently gave a synopsis on Napoleon. And then he asked another question. "What were the XYZ Papers?"

"The twins looked at their plates with knitted brows. Then they looked at each other."

John looked blank. "Never saw it before."

"We have a whole bed of growing right under your nose and you don't mean to say you never acquired it?"

"Can you mean that? But you won't forget by tomorrow."

"You have up" as she held out each blossom. The twins, however, knew the names. Delphinium, larkspur, larkspur, pyrethrum and summer.

John looked at his children admiringly. "Where did you learn this?"

"Mother taught us. We know the names of almost every kind of flower, wild ones too," declared Barbara proudly.

"You see, they aren't quite useless, my dear," smiled his wife. Does it give you an idea?

Billie: Being the youngest of six boys is no joke, it is Bill! Naturally your brothers think you are an infant and give you the dirty jobs to do. They want you to know their authority. I am glad you laugh off the raising. That is the best way keep it up.

Yes, you are old enough to go out with girls your own age once in a while, and I'd just quit that right if I were you. Also on having sex time off. Stand up for your rights, although it is good naturally, and in a short time you will be older and allowed more liberty. Good luck to you.

"American's Most Famous Beauty" When one of these cinema stars strutted about on the screen garbed in a sleek, clinging evening gown, don't try to show off here.

"Not to read when they are getting sun and exercise through the summer. Look here, air."

She pulled over the bouquet of garden flowers from the middle toward her plate. One by one she laid out the different blossoms.

"What is this called?"

"Well, there are books right under their noses. What is a library?" asked scholarly John.
